BIENVENUE A LA NOUVELLE-ORLEANS, Y'ALL!

Welcome to the 37th annual conference of the Society for Cross-Cultural Research, and the annual conference of the Society for Anthropological Sciences (SASci). We thank you for your support and interest. As evidenced by a record number of submissions, SCCR and SASci clearly are vital and growing organizations. It is especially gratifying to have over 100 students registered for the conference, and we encourage students to get involved with SCCR and SASci in the years to come. We hope each of you will share the intellectual excitement of this conference, and have the opportunity to establish new professional bonds, and rekindle old bonds, with colleagues at the social events scheduled around the conference. It is our hope that the energy generated by this conference will have a lasting effect on the future of SCCR and SASci.

In a world of homogenous malls, junk food, and chain hotels, you can find something different in New Orleans. As one interested in culture, you will have to go out and look for it – the culture won't come to you. New Orleans is all about culture, and in New Orleans it's all personal, too. One native of New Orleans friend told us recently that "We in Louisiana open our hearts. We're an emotional people, and with us what you see is what you get." Perhaps the most important experience you may have in New Orleans is to understand the hearts of individual local people. These folks include scholars and students attending the conference – for example, after Katrina one member of our local planning committee lived for a year in a FEMA trailer, while another attendee lost her house to flooding and a year later lost her trailer to a tornado. You can discover or rediscover New Orleans culture best through its people. Please take the time to talk to store clerks, waiters, cab drivers, and even to the hotel staff. It's not hard to strike up a conversation with a New Orleanian. Everybody has a Katrina story to tell, and the best thing about New Orleans is its everyday people.

Any scholar interested in culture ought to be interested in visiting a city where a culture was so severely threatened. Most conference sessions will not be about Louisiana or New Orleans culture, but the setting and several events will give the meetings a local flavor. Many scholars and students from over a dozen local universities are on the program. For example, our Thursday afternoon keynote session features four leading specialists on Louisiana, Cajun, and Creole cultures. The heart of this conference is its attendees, and we appreciate your attendance.

DESCRIPTIONS OF SASCI AND SCCR

Society for Cross-Cultural Research (www.sccr.org)

SCCR is a multi-disciplinary organization of about 150 members. Its members all share a common devotion to the conduct of cross-cultural research. SCCR members are professionals and students from the social science fields of Psychology, Anthropology, Sociology, and related fields including Education, Family Studies, Social Work, Human Development, Psychiatry, Communications, Ethnic Studies, Business, etc. A distinguishing characteristic of the Society, compared with other organizations, is that is fundamentally inter-disciplinary and provides members the opportunity to network with scholars from a wide variety of approaches to cross-cultural research. As stated in its bylaws, “The purpose of the Society is to support and encourage interdisciplinary, comparative research that has as its objective the establishment of scientifically described generalizations about human behavior.” As the field of cross-cultural studies evolves into the 21st century, SCCR opens its doors to a variety of theoretical and methodological viewpoints. The full range of papers presented at its annual meetings now includes approaches (most often comparative) that are cross-cultural or multi-cultural, etic or emic, scientific or applied, quantitative or qualitative, and focused on both human universality and diversity. The SCCR was founded in 1971. Based on a commitment to the multi-disciplinary approach, the SCCR Presidency rotates among anthropologists, psychologists, and other social scientists. Early members were heavily involved in hologeistic research, but the perspectives of the SCCR members have diversified over the years. Proud of its history, SCCR looks forward to growing into the future by addressing needs and interests of its increasingly diverse membership. The Society sponsors the quarterly journal Cross-Cultural Research (Sage Publications) and also publishes the SCCR Newsletter.

Society for Anthropological Sciences (www.anthrosciences.org)

The purpose of SASci is to advance the scientific study of human societies through scholarly meetings, publications, and related activities. The members of SASci want to further the development of anthropological science as empirical knowledge based on testable theory, sound research design and systematic methods for the collection and analysis of data. We seek to fulfill the historic mission of anthropology to describe and explain the range of variation in human biology, society, culture, and language across time and space. SASci also advances the dissemination of anthropological knowledge within the scientific community and to the broader general public. SASci encourages active student participation and facilitates student incorporation into the professional research community. SASci unofficially started up in late 2002, was incorporated in early 2006, and has met jointly for annual meetings with SCCR since 2005. SASci shares a joint board with the Section for Anthropological Sciences of the American Anthropological Association. Information about membership, by-laws, anthropological resources, and meetings can be found at <http://www.anthrosciences.org>.

Ray Brassieur, Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Louisiana – Lafayette, began his experiences in cultural studies began during the mid-1970s as a field archaeologist in southwest Louisiana. His interests include material folk culture, coastal and wetland ethnography, heritage conservation, public representation of culture, and all forms of expressive culture — especially among the North American French. His master's project at LSU (1980) combined his interests in cultural resources management and ethnography, focusing on folk cultures and cultural lifeways of the Atchafalaya Basin. In the 1980s he worked closely with various aspects of traditional Louisiana heritage, and in 1988, he moved to Missouri as program coordinator for the University of Missouri Cultural Heritage Center. In 1993, he became the first director of the State Historical Society of Missouri Oral History Program. His doctorate focused on expressions of French identity in the Mid-Mississippi Valley (Missouri/Illinois). Returning to Louisiana in 1999, he became Louisiana Regional Folklorist for the New Orleans region and in 2001 began work at the University of Louisiana. <http://soci-anth.louisiana.edu/facultystaff/brassieur.shtml>

Thomas Klingler, chair of the Tulane University Department of French and Italian, is a linguist specializing in the French and Creole languages of Louisiana. He is the author of If I Could Turn My Tongue Like That: The Creole Language of Pointe Coupee Parish, Louisiana (Louisiana State University Press, 2003) and coauthor of the Dictionary of Louisiana Creole (Indiana University Press, 1998). Professor Klingler has received grants and fellowships from numerous sources, including the National Endowment for the Humanities, the American Council of Learned Societies, the French Cultural Services, the Louisiana Board of Regents, and the Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities. His research and teaching interests include phonetics, dialectology, lexicography, and French outside of France. www.tulane.edu/~fren\_it/faculty.htm

FRIDAY KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Richard A. Shweder, PhD, is a cultural anthropologist and the William Claude Reavis Distinguished Service Professor of Human Development in the Department of Comparative Human Development at the University of Chicago. For the past thirty-eight years Professor Shweder has conducted research in cultural psychology on moral reasoning, emotional functioning, gender roles, explanations of illness, ideas about the causes of suffering, and the moral foundations of family life practices in the Hindu temple town of Bhubaneswar on the East Coast of India. His recent research examines the scopes and limits of pluralism and the multicultural challenge in Western liberal democracies. He examines the norm conflicts that arise when people migrate from Africa, Asia and Latin America to countries in the North. He is author of Thinking Through Cultures: Expeditions in Cultural Psychology and Why Do Men Barbecue? Recipes for Cultural Psychology (both Harvard Univ. Press) and has edited or co-edited numerous books on cultural psychology, psychological anthropology and comparative human development. <http://psychology.uchicago.edu/people/faculty/rshweder.shtml>

Michael J. Stevens, PhD, DHC, is a professor of psychology at Illinois State University and licensed clinical psychologist. He is Past-President of the APA's Division of International Psychology. He is a Fellow of the Division and received its Outstanding Mentor and Recognition awards. He is an honorary professor at The Lucian Blaga University in Romania, where he completed a Fulbright grant and received the Doctor Honoris Causa degree. He has been invited to lecture in Argentina, China, Cyprus, Guatemala, Finland, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Uruguay, and Vietnam. Recent scholarship on international psychology includes the Handbook of International Psychology (2004) and Toward a Global Psychology (2007). He is co-editor of the CD-ROM, Psychology: IUPsyS Global Resource, now in its ninth edition. Professor Stevens' research interests are broad and varied. He is currently engaged in articulating and validating a social constructionist model of terrorism. His other research centers on refitting existential psychology into the empirically supported stress-and-coping framework, and on adapting and applying the MMPI-2 outside the U.S. <http://www.psychology.ilstu.edu/mjstevn>

Thomas S. Weisner, PhD, is Professor of in the Departments of Psychiatry and Anthropology, and Director of the NPI/Semel Institute Center for Culture and Health, at UCLA. He is a past President of the Society for Psychological Anthropology. His research interests are in culture and human development; medical, psychological and cultural studies of families and children at risk; mixed methods; and evidence-informed policy. He has done field research in Kenya, Hawaii and in a variety of United States family settings. He is currently studying impacts on children and families of changes in welfare and family supports, based on a longitudinal study over 8 years of a successful random-assignment experimental support program for working-poor parents. He is the co-author of Higher Ground: New Hope for the Working Poor and Their Children (2007); co-editor of Making it work: Low-wage employment, family life and child development (2006); editor of Discovering successful pathways in children's development: New methods in the study of childhood and family life (2005); and co-editor of African families and the crisis of social change (1997). <http://cultureandhealth.ucla.edu/tweisner/>

CITY OF NEW ORLEANS
C. RAY NAGIN, MAYOR

A MESSAGE FROM MAYOR C. RAY NAGIN
TO THE
SOCIETY FOR CROSS-CULTURAL RESEARCH

February 20 - 23, 2008

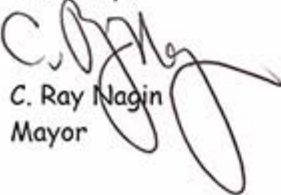

On behalf of the City of New Orleans, I welcome you to one of the most unique, diverse, historically and culturally rich regions in the country. I am honored that you have chosen to convene in New Orleans to further your research in promoting international understanding and in comparing cultures around the world.

As we forward in our recovery process, there are many factors of concern, such as housing, healthcare, economic development, education, infrastructure, etc. The list seems endless. New Orleans is proud to welcome groups such as the Society for Cross-Cultural Research because you foster international and multi-cultural understanding.

During your stay, please take time to experience the uniqueness of New Orleans. Drawing from French, Spanish and West African influences, our heritage thrives through endless varieties of architecture, music and food. Our authentic Creole and Cajun restaurants, jazz clubs, shady courtyards, clacking streetcars and horse-drawn carriages help make this city one of the top cultural destinations in the world. Please be sure to visit our world-renowned Audubon Zoo and the Aquarium of the Americas.

Here's to a pleasant and enjoyable conference!

Sincerely,

C. Ray Nagin
Mayor

Dear Mr. Shwalb:

As Lieutenant Governor of the state of Louisiana, on behalf of our citizens, I would like to extend an invitation to Society for Cross Cultural Research. I am excited that you chose New Orleans as the site for your 2008 Annual Meeting.

New Orleans is one of the most culturally rich cities in the world. It is a city that gave birth to jazz; that today reflects more architecture from more centuries than any other city in the nation; that serves a wonderful cuisine with European, African and Caribbean traditions, but updated by inventive young chefs.

The decorative ironwork, tropical courtyards, centuries-old oak trees, graceful mansions, and charming cottages are all still here. I invite you to come enjoy all of these facets of the city, but also to witness the "new" New Orleans, a city in the making.

It is a city where our vibrant, walkable downtown contains both gleaming office towers next to newly expanded and innovative museums, art galleries and shopping centers.

New Orleans' history as a city of mystery, romance and music does not obscure New Orleans' present and future as a city of progress and enterprise. After this event, I know you will want to return again soon, for business and pleasure. I am sure you are in good hands in creating a successful symposium with Jan Lohman at the New Orleans Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Yours very truly,

Dear Friends:

Welcome to the website for the 2008 Society for Cross-Cultural Research annual convention! I hope that you will plan on joining your colleagues in New Orleans for this exciting event. I am certain that in addition to your conference sessions, you will enjoy your stay and come to love New Orleans as much as we do. As you tour this beautiful city, you will surely be impressed by its uniqueness, including delicious Louisiana Cajun and Creole cooking, a continuous celebration of jazz and the arts, French and Spanish architecture, and most of all, a diverse people who know how to have a great time.

For first time visitors, I would encourage you to visit the city's historic sites, such as the St. Louis Cathedral and Audubon Park. You will enjoy shopping and dining in the many shops and restaurants in the French Quarter, as well as touring our fascinating museums, including the National World War II Museum. If you are bringing your family, you might also consider the Audubon Aquarium and the Audubon Zoo for a good time, or a short drive to one of Louisiana's many beautiful, historic plantation homes.

As you know, New Orleans and the entire State of Louisiana faced tragic losses in 2005 with Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, but we hope that you experience the strength and tenacity of our people. We are thankful to have you here with us and hope your stay is one you will always remember!

With warmest regards,

Bobby Jindal

New Orleans Restaurant Guide

Compiled and annotated by Jeanne Kessler and David Beriss (University of New Orleans Department of Anthropology)

Katrina's floods shut down every restaurant in New Orleans, but restaurant owners, chefs, and other restaurant workers were among the city's early heroes, working quickly to get back and provide sustenance for first responders and residents. Despite severe losses, the Crescent City remains one of America's great restaurant towns. This guide is far from comprehensive. Knowing a few terms may help you navigate the city's dining scene. Creole often refers to the urban haute cuisine of New Orleans, while Cajun is the more rustic cooking of rural south Louisiana, but New Orleans cuisine mixes both today. A po'boy sandwich is made with local French bread and roast beef, sausage or some kind of fried seafood. If you get it dressed they will add lettuce, tomatoes and pickles. A muffuletta is a big round sandwich made from cold cuts, cheese and olive dressing and is often large enough for 2-4 people. Gumbo is somewhere between a soup and a stew, usually based on a dark roux. Barbecue shrimp are not barbecued, but are usually delicious. Boudin is a rice and pork sausage (not blood sausage!) and andouille is a spicy pork sausage. Bread pudding is the classic local dessert and you should have one. Beignets are oblong deep fried dough with powdered sugar, best eaten with the local coffee, which is strong and flavored with chicory. Local cocktails include the Sazerac and the Hurricane and you can get a "go-cup" to carry your drink out in most bars in the French Quarter. Lagniappe is a little something extra. If you hear people discussing "sucking heads and squeezing tails," it has to do with boiled crawfish, which are in season now. Finally, if someone offers to bet they know where you got them shoes on your feet...don't.
